Judge Peter S. Grosscup of Chicago Rises to Inquire if Americans Are Mad.

COCKPAN'S SPEECH IS TEXT

NEITHER CRUSADE NOR CRU-SADER WANTED.

Rock Island, Ill., Feb. 12.-Judge Peter 8. Grosscup of Chicago was the principal speaker tonight at the annual Lincoln day banquet of the Rock Island club. The affair was attended by 100 leading business and professional men. Judge Grosscup said:

Grosscup's Address.

"Mr. Burke Cochran, in a speech in the house the other day, said that what the tinction of party, is said to have loudly applauded. A crusade and a crusader! Zeal put above judgment; mere vigor of enthusiasm above the sober earnestness of the American common sense. Have the people gone mad? country needs is a crusade and a cruof the American common sense. Have the people gone mad?

"A crusade against what? Against the great new industrial domain of the country that is in corporate form—the great new domain in which the energies and the fortunes of the American people are so largely bound up? The American farmer who has reaped prosperity out of the markets that the great new incorthe markets that the great new incor-porated domain has established, and the American workingman, who knows that in this domain alone is to be found his field of opportunity, will think long and carefully before they go in for a crusade

A crusade against what? Against held at the Fi lew? Why should not the offenders against the law be tried in the future, as they have been in the past, according to the forms of the law-to the executive the duty and responsibility of presenting the charge, to the judiciary the duty and responsibility of determining guilt or innocence? Has anything happened that the sober, Anglo-Saxon way of enforcing law should be abandoned?

Crusade to Catch the Voter.

A crusade to catch the voter-to ob tain a lease of political power at the approaching elections? I am one of those who believe that an appeal to the sober common sense and love of justice of the American people will be infinitely more effective than any attempt to hurry them that they do not comprehend. As statesmen, Washington and Lincoln are still our exemplars—Peter the Hermit and Richard the Lion Hearted are only traditions.

'For two score years and more, even since the close of the civil war, a new, great industrial domain has been building. Through its channels American manufacturers and commerce are reach-ing every corner of the earth. Through the markets it established, and the business activity it has created, the Amercan farmer has been getting prices that have made him the money lender of the land, and the American workingman wages that have made him the highest paid workingman of all lands. But for the rise and growth of this great domain we would not now be in the world's lead as an industrial people; we would be back among the people whose farms harvest just enough to keep them either the people whose farms harvest just enough to keep them either the people whose farms harvest just enough to keep them either the people whose farms harvest just enough to keep them either the people whose farms harvest just enough to keep them either the people whose farms harvest just enough to keep them. WANTED—100 machine men; must be first-class miners. Apply 211 Atlas block Thursday and Friday, 8:30 a. m. to 4:30 p. m. just enough to keep them alive from year to year, and whose workingmen have no prospect beyond the bread that is neces-sary to sustain life. And this great do-main, strange as it may seem in the presence of what is being constantly said against the American corporation, is al-most altogether an incorporated domain Indeed, what government is to mankind politically organized, the corporation has become to modern industry organized.

McKinley Prosperity.

"The ideal of Lincoln was, government of the people, by the people, and for the people. Lincoln believed in the capacity and integrity of America and the American—the American farmer, the American business man the American workingman business man, the American workingman, American character. The ideal of Mc-Kinley was the prosperity of his country—a prosperity of the people, by the people and for the people—a prosperity shared in by every individual who was ready with hand or brain to take part in it; and Mc-Kinley lived long enough to see, not through any program of indiscriminate denunciation, but through legislation, both practical and effective, his ideal realized. business man, the American workingman

"We have come, I believe, to a time "We have come, I believe to a time when within the nation's heart there stirs a new ideal as deep and true as Lincoln's—an ideal that will eventually quicken the new great industrial domain into something that will make that domain also a rossession of the people, by the people, and for the people—the Lincoln ideal enlarged; the McKinley ideal broadened. But there will be no real be ginning toward the realization of thi ideal until the reformative energy of the nation grapples with the work, not merenation grapples with the work, in the work, it is in curbing the corporation as the corporation is now allowed to construct itself, or of enforcing the law as the law itself, or of enforcing the law as the law itself, or of enforcing the law as the law itself, or of enforcing the law as the law itself, or of enforcing the law as the law itself, or of enforcing the law as the law itself, or of enforcing the law as the law itself, or of enforcing the law as the law itself, or of enforcing the law as the law itself, or of enforcing the law as the law itself, or of enforcing the law as the law itself, or of enforcing the law as the law itself, or of enforcing the law is the law itself, or of enforcing the law is the law itself, or of enforcing the law is the law itself, or of enforcing the law is the law itself, or of enforcing the law is now stands, but of so reconstructing the corporation, from the ground up, through national and state law, that it will become in truth and in fact a trustworthy agent for the wielding of the nation's energy and a trustworthy medium through which

Real Corporation Reform.

"Between the engineer and other rail way employes and the great railway cor-poration, between the men who roll stee and the great steel corporations, between the workingman generally and the cor-poration for which he works, between the man whose thrift has put saving. nto the bank and the corporations than ave borrowed them out, there will, when real corporation reform is achieved, be no room for those feelings of antagonism that give rise to a crusade; for when rea corporation reform is accomplished—when he broadened ideal is on its way to re alization—the great new incorporated do main, as a field for the acquirement of an enduring individual possession, will be open to the workingman as well as to the capitalist, and to the man who has savings to put in the bank as well as to the men who are now borrowing them out. And the great responsibility that con-fronts President Roosevelt, whatever may be the provocation or the temptation that befalls him, is to see to it that the reformative energies of the nation that he has been so instrumental in arousing are not used up in storms and counter-storms of crimination and recrimination. nat, when they subside, will leave us no Strength with which to enter upon the
